YOUNG MISS IS FORCED TO DRINK

Fifteen-Year-Old Minnie Shelton
Says Companion Made Her Drink Wine.

WERE SHOOTING THE CHUTES

Male Companions Had Girls by the Heels Dragging Them Along
the Sidewalk.

There was a tinge of deep pathos in a spectacle in West First street Saturday night that for the time being provoked no end of merriment on the part of those who witnessed the affair. Two girls were seated upon the sidewalk while two men had hold of their heels and dragged them along, a la bump the bumps.

To all appearance the party was having the time of their lives, shouting, laughing and fairly bubbling over with joy. Too much joy water was the cause of the unusual performance. The two girls that occupied "cement parlor car" seats were Minnie Shelton and Goldie Dinwiddie, and the men "playing horse" were Maurice Borem and Charles Wilson.

The happy, rollicking band struck a snag at the alley crossing near the Social club. They came slipping, sliding along, putting up a performance that would make a Salome dancer turn to shame, when out of the alley came Flemming Pea. One of the party bumped into Pea, and an altercation followed. Borem and Pea mixed up and after the latter planted a solar plexus on Borem's anatomy the jolly serenader took the count and measured six feet of the sidewalk. About this time City Marshal Price appeared on the scene and things were doing in a jiffy. The Shelton girl and Wilson and Borem were placed under arrest and taken to jail. Fleet-footed Goldie, the "Child Reindeer," was off with the first glimpse at the blue suit and brass buttons, and made good her escape. The last call in court today found her still among the missing. Wilson and Borem plead guilty to a charge of drunkenness and were fined one dollar and costs. Miss Shelton was fined a like amount. The girl is but fifteen years of age.

Miss Shelton was questioned closely as to where she got the liquor which made her drunk and she stoutly maintained that the Dinwiddie girl gave it to her—in fact, made her take it.

"What were you trying to do?" she was asked.

"Who, me?" she said giving her head a toss of unconcern. "I wasn't trying to do anything—it was Kid Dinwiddie. She was polluted and guess she wanted to get me souzed, too. She grabbed hold of me and poured a lot of blackberry wine down my throat. I never went against this booze game before and the stuff soon put me down and out and in the clear."

This afternoon Minnie was looking for a bondsman and said if someone would stand behind her for the "ten easers" she would pay it off at "two plunks per" as she has been promised a raise of fifty cents a week in her salary at the Hambrook boarding house, where she is employed as a domestic.

WILL APPEAR UPON LYCEUM PLATFORM

Congressman James E. Watson Left
Today to Fill Several Lecture Engagements.

THROUGH IOWA AND MICHIGAN

Congressman James E. Watson left today to fill a number of engagements upon the lecture platform in the States of Iowa and Michigan. The demand for Mr. Watson as a popular lecturer has increased daily, and he is scarcely able to meet all that is asked of him.

The itinerary is as follows: Iowa City, Iowa, November 17; Mason City, Iowa, November 18; West Liberty, Iowa, November 19; Keokuk, Iowa, November 20; Lansing, Michigan, November 23; Owasa, Michigan, November 24.

RUSH COUNTY STILL IN THE RAIN BELT

J. Pluvius Favored Three Spots in Indiana and Rush Was Among Those Present.

LONGEST DROUGHT ON RECORD

In the report for October of the Indiana section of the Weather Bureau it is set forth in regard to the "drought of 1908 in Indiana," that "at scattered places in the northern district on August 16 and 17 and in the southern district on August 17 and 18, light showers, in most cases less than .50 inch occurred, and at Laporte on August 29, and localities in Henry and Rush counties on September 14, refreshing showers fell. With these exceptions, the State was practically rainless from August 14 to September 27, inclusive, a period of forty-five days. There probably was never another drought period of equal length, intensity and extent experienced in this State; certainly none during the period covered by the records of the weather bureau, which extends back to 1871."

JUST LOTS OF LOTS FREE

Novel Scheme Inaugurated by the

Some patron will receive a lot free of charge each night. You will have your eyes opened and be intensely interested every night in this unusual proposition. Go and see for yourself.

Generally fair tonight and Tuesday, except possibly threatening in north portion.

HAD PACKAGE AND AFFINITY

Jeremiah Gordon, of Arlington, Got in Bad at Indianapolis Terminal Station.

DISCLAIMED KNOWING WOMAN

Who Clung to His Arm as the Two Staggered About the Station.
Both Arrested.

A Rush county man was in the limelight at the Indianapolis terminal station Saturday evening, and later landed in the dark at the police station. The Indianapolis Sunday Star tells the story as follows:

"Jeremiah Gordon, 52 years old, and Mary Dillon, 45 years old, were having some difficulty in carrying on a conversation at the Traction Terminal Station Saturday, when a patrolman placed them under arrest. There did not seem to be any quarrelsome difference between them, but each had trouble in expressing particular ideas. Both staggered when they tried to walk around—arm-in-arm. The couple attracted much attention and the loud talk resulted in their riding to the police station in the auto patrol. Gordon could not tell where he was from, but a return ticket to Arlington, Ind., satisfied the police as to his place of residence. He asserts he never saw the woman before. She gave her address as "city"—seemed to forget the exact location. Both were without money. They will face charges of intoxication in the police court Monday."

SUGGEST ANOTHER PLACE FOR WATSON

Washington Gossip Has it That he Will go to London as Consul General.

VERY IMPORTANT POSITION

A special from Washington Saturday said: "The good angels of the Republican party are busy trying to find places for the 'lame ducks.'" The latest proposition is that 'Jim' Watson, who gave up his seat in congress to run for governor of Indiana, and was defeated, shall be appointed consul general to London, the best paying position Mr. Taft will have to bestow. Robert J. Wynne, formerly a Washington newspaper man and postmaster general from the time of the death of Henry C. Payne, until Mr. Cortelyou was ready to take the job, now holds the London billet and is not at all anxious to let go, but as absence from the country prevented his contribution in any way to the Taft cause, he has no particular claim."

WENT THROUGH OUR PLANT.

MISSING WORD CONTEST TODAY

Daily Republican Starts Today With
a Five Weeks Interesting Proposition.

START WITH THE FIRST ISSUE

A Profitable and Interesting Half Hour Can be Spent in a Perusal of the Ads.

Just as soon as you finish this part of the paper turn to page five and enjoy a few minutes scanning the ads thereon and look for the missing words. Several words are purposely left out of the advertisements, and a prize of one dollar will be given to the first correct answer received in this office Wednesday morning. Read the full and complete directions on page five.

One dollar will be given away each day by the Daily Republican and in addition several of the merchants will offer a prize of one dollar each.

The Missing Word contest has a three-fold purpose. In the first place it will stimulate advertising; then it insures a careful perusal of all the advertisements; second, it affords the merchants an opportunity to reach a large class of people at this particular time when holiday trading will soon be in order. And third, last and best of all, it is a medium by which the entire family can sit down each evening for the next five weeks and enjoy a hunt for the missing words with an opportunity of winning several dollars in a healthy and legitimate contest.

So get busy and look over the ads. Have the children look them over and get the answers according to the directions appearing on the same page with the advertisements.

Mr. Richie is a good first tenor and can ably fill the vacancy made by Robinson. This organization will fill their first engagement at the Folsom smoker Monday, November 30. The quartette has several other engagements for the winter. The other members of the quartette are Elgar Higgs, Clifford Maxey and Barton Caldwell.

DONEGAN ON PILE DRIVER.

New Castle Courier: Harry Hayes is conductor of the Rushville train, temporarily. Al Donegan, the regular man, is in charge of a pile driver train, operating near Rushville. He will work in that locality for a week or ten days.

Sauer kraut will be a luxury this year. The dry season cut short the crop of cabbage that usually goes into that viand.

LOCAL POST WILL ATTEND

Big Salvation Army Rally at Con-nersville Next Friday.

There will be a big rally at the Salvation Army barracks Friday night, November 20th, says the Connorsville Examiner. Major McPherson, of Detroit, will be on hand and the Salvation Army from Rushville will attend also. The children will sing and everybody is invited.

INDIANA PURDUE GAME SATURDAY

Rushville Has Students at Both Schools and Two Former Gridiron Stars.

CHANCES ARE ABOUT EVEN.

Who will win, Indiana or Purdue?

That's the question that many Rushville football enthusiasts are asking. The game, which will be played next Saturday at Lafayette, has a double interest here. Each school has several students from this city, and in addition, Rushville has two citizens who were former members of the team. Ora Herkless was at one time one of the best players the Purdue team had, and Dr. W. S. Coleman was a star on the Indiana eleven.

Several from this city will go to Lafayette Saturday to see the game. The advance dope gives the two schools almost equal chances to win. If any difference, Purdue has a shade the better of the argument. The only comparative scores which can be used, are with Chicago and Illinois. Chicago beat Indiana 29 to 6, and walloped Purdue 39 to 0. Illinois kept Indiana from scoring and made 11 points, while the score with Purdue last Saturday was 15 to 6. Indiana, on the other hand, has not been playing the quality of foot ball she did when she met Chicago, and Purdue has seemingly strengthened.

Meanwhile the guessing, and betting occasionally, goes on.

TRIBBEY CASE POSTPONED

Will Not Come up in Circuit Court
Until Dec. 14.

The case of the State vs John Tribbey has been postponed until Dec. 14. Tribbey is out on bond for several misdemeanors committed around Arlington. One of the charges is shooting with intent to kill.

BY THE WAYSIDE

Among the contributors to a preacher's donation party at Shelbyville was a small but very bright boy of the congregation. After obtaining his mother's consent to spend his money for anything he pleased he brought from the store a neat package. It was a pair of suspenders and a card was attached reading "For the support of our pastor."

A band of Syrian peddlers passed through this city today. They said they were from Jerusalem and were traveling around over the State selling their wares. A number of them had their pictures taken at the Wolf gallery.

M. F. Shank, who has lived for fourteen years on a farm a mile and a half north of Gings, moves Tuesday to the old Shank farm, now owned by Burl Hinchman, near the Ben Davis Creek church.

COOL AIR STILL FULL OF POLITICS

Young Lady Enters the Race for County Supt. Headlee's Former Place.

FIVE ASPIRANTS FOR TOGA

Four Capable Educators Have Backing in Favorite Trustees—Contest Comes Wednesday.

There is quite a bit of politics being brought into play for the appointment of a successor to Supt. W. O. Headlee, the county superintendent of schools who resigned last week. The vacancy will be filled by the township trustees when they meet on Wednesday of this week. All of the avowed candidates have had their friends working for them and the township trustees are almost as busy hearing arguments of favor these exhilarating November days as the representatives were when the county option bill was under consideration at the extraordinary session of the legislature.

Another phase of the situation—and a novel one, too—was the entering of a woman in the race. It is understood that Miss Bertha Bunker, principal of the Raleigh schools is an active candidate for the Headlee toga. This is probably the first time that a woman ever aspired for the place in this county.

There are four men in the field, working with much vim and vigor. They are C. M. George, Orlando Randall, W. A. Stockinger and John Geraghty. George is principal of the New Salem school; Randall is principal of the Mays schools; Stockinger is a professor of history in the local high school and filled the place for one year, and Geraghty formerly was supervisor of schools in the Philippines and has been attending to the duties of Supt. Headlee during his absence this past summer.

Every one in the race has the support of one or more trustees and as it requires the votes of seven to win, there are now visions of a long, drawn-out, friendly contested race, with side features of deadlocks, withdrawals and other political things attending.

THE GUNNESS CASE ON TRIAL

State's Evidence Being Presented This Week.

DOCTOR IDENTIFIED TEETH

State Is Striving to Prove the Death of Mrs. Gunness by Identification of Teeth and Jewelry, While the Defense Will Probably Rely on the Poison Theory.

Laporte, Ind., Nov. 16.—The establishment of the death of Mrs. Belle Gunness by the positive identification by Dr. I. P. Norton, of her teeth, found in the ruins of the fire, supplemented by the identification of the rings which she wore, and other corroborative evidence offered by the state in the trial of Ray Lamphere, has practically removed one element from the case, which is now about ready to settle down to the presentation of proof that the defendant set fire to the Gunness house and thereby caused the death of the woman and her three children.

Attorneys Worden and Weier, for the defense, do not admit that their cause has suffered any by the state's evidence, for they are basing their case on the testimony of Dr. Walter S. Haines, who will swear that he found arsenic and strychnine in the stomachs of Mrs. Gunness and two of the children.

FIVE INDICTMENTS RETURNED.

Harry Axtell Arrested at Bloomington on Charges of Embezzlement.

Bloomington, Ind., Nov. 16.—Harry Axtell, city treasurer of Bloomington for a period of ten years, who resigned in June this year, was arrested after the grand jury had returned five indictments against him. Four of the counts allege embezzlement and one is for forgery.

It is alleged in one of the indictments that on May 6, 1907, he forged the name of his mother-in-law, Mrs. Redrick Wylie, to a $10,000 bond as his security as secretary of the Real Estate Building, Loan and Savings Association, which was wrecked in July on account of Axtell's shortages.

The attorneys on each side, with the prosecutor, met before Judge Wilson and there was considerable argument concerning the amounts of the bonds. The judge finally placed the total bond at $4,500, and set the trial of the first case for Jan. 15. Mr. Axtell was in the custody of the sheriff for two hours, after which his bond was made out with Mrs. Susan Axtell and Charles Axtell as sureties.

Editors Will Meet. Thomas R. Marshall, Robert J. Aleey, Bloomington, and Isaac R. Strause, of Rockville, will be the stellar attractions. It was also agreed that the Democratic United States senator-elect will have a place on the program. On Friday, Feb. 5, the regular business meeting will be held, at which a number of interesting papers will be read.

Reformatory Buildings Burned. Jeffersonville, Ind., Nov. 16.—Five buildings of the Indiana state reformatory and nearly the entire plant of the Indiana Manufacturing company here, were destroyed by fire Sunday. The loss will total about $250,000. There were no fatalities, the 1,300 inmates of the reformatory remaining locked in their cells, a portion of them sending cheer after cheer through the grated windows as they watched the work of the firemen.

Rich Haul in Stamps. South Bend, Ind., Nov. 16.—Burglars robbed the South Bend postoffice of $18,653 in stamps and made a successful escape. The plunder included 25-cent books of one cent stamps, 1,000 25-cent books of two-cent stamps, 500 49-cent books and 500 97-cent books.

"Chick" Stahl's Wife Dead. Ft. Wayne, Ind., Nov. 16.—A dispatch from Boston states that the widow of "Chick" Stahl, the ball player, was found dead in a doorway last night. Foul play is suspected. Stahl, who played with Boston Americans, committed suicide at French Lick in March, 1907.

Arrested for Kidnaping. Terre Haute, Ind., Nov. 16.—Charged with kidnaping her nine-year-old cousin, Ada Glasco, of Anderson, Mrs. Clara Gordon, thirty-one years old, was arrested by Patrolman Garrett and Bowsher at the request of the police at Anderson, Ind. Mrs. Gordon denied any knowledge of the girl and declared that she had been in Anderson for a number of years.

COUNTY OPTION IN DANGER.

It Is Believed Brewers Will Fight for Repeal.

Indianapolis, Nov. 16.—Up to this time there has been very little talk among the Democratic leaders regarding the proposed repeal of the county local option bill. There is no doubt, however, but that the brewers will make the fight of their lives to have the law wiped off the books or modified. They regard it as the next thing to state wide prohibition and they say that if it is not repealed that it will be all off with their business in three fourths of the counties before the end of the next two years. The brewers threw the immense power of their organization behind the Democratic ticket and they are about ready to demand their reward. It is supposed now that the course they will pursue will be to have introduced a bill providing for a township and ward unit as declared for in the Democratic platform, and repealing all conflicting laws. This would do away with the county local option feature. Many politicians believe that this can be accomplished, but the anti-saloon league is getting ready to arouse the temperance forces to opposition. The combine and thousands of Germans and "liberal" Republicans who supported Marshall are expecting him to come through with his influence in behalf of the township and ward unit, but Marshall has not indicated what he will do. He is showing that he knows how to keep his own business to himself. One of his intimate friends declared today that Marshall will not deal with the local option question in any way in his message to the legislature. He predicted that Marshall will veto any bill to repeal the county local option law, although he refused during the campaign to say what his attitude would be if he was called on to act in such a contingency. Another man who was with Marshall during a part of his tour of southern Indiana says that Marshall gave him to understand very emphatically that he was not opposed to county local option and that he would have expressed himself plainly to the public had he not feared that he might hurt the chances of the other candidates on the Democratic ticket. While Marshall may be liberal in his views the word is coming from his own community that he is a strong temperance man and those who are expecting him to "deliver the goods" to the opponents of the county local option law do not understand his views. The effort to repeal the county local option law will have the support of some of the Republican members who feel that their party has suffered enough on account of that issue.

Without any political firearms concealed about his person, Steven B. Fleming, state senator-elect from Ft. Wayne, arrived here yesterday afternoon. Although it has been reported for a week that he was wearing war paint and was hot on the trail of Tom Taggart as well as Kern, Fleming looked as meek as any of the party workers. He said that he came here on a business mission. "I have not taken any hand in the senatorial fight" he added. "I don't know what is going on and I am not carrying any battle-axes for anyone. I am not after anyone's scalp. In fact, I know very little about the contest as I have just returned from New York."

The Pole Star.

Ursa Major and Ursa Minor are known also as the triones and as the Greater Wain and the Lesser Wain. It is curious to note that the larger constellation was given the figure of the bear by the Arabs and by the Troquois red men. The assumed forms are ordinarily fanciful, and the identity of the names in this instance affords food for speculation. Homer uses both bear and wain (wagon) in his references to these stars. It is evident that the name bear was a translation from some original Aryan language, as the constellation is called in Sanskrit riksha, a word that in different genders means both a bear and a star. Of course the polar star in the tail of Ursa Minor is the constellation's point of glory. In this case we may say fairly that the tail wags the dog, because the group of stars was once called the dog's tail, or cynosure. From that we have our word cynosure, that toward which all eyes turn, as to the dog's tail for sight of the pole star.—Minneapolis Tribune.

Hon. J. B. Foraker Gives Out
Some Correspondence.
IN REGARD TO HIS EMPLOYMENT

Some Pre-Election Correspondence Between Him and Virgil P. Kline as to His Employment by the Standard Oil Company Is Now Given to the Public.

Cincinnati, O., Nov. 16.—The following statement by Senator Joseph B. Foraker was given to the press today:

Now that the election is over, and the people have read and studied the returns, I deem it an opportune time, and my duty to my constituents, as well as to myself, to publish the following correspondence:

Cincinnati, Oct. 5, 1908
"Virgil P. Kline, Esq., Cleveland, O.
"Dear Sir:—In view of the charges of Mr. Hearst and the discussion now going on in the newspapers as to the character of my employment by the Standard Oil Company, and the services I rendered under such employment, I would be glad if you would write me in regard thereto, and give me permission to use your letter if occasion should seem to require it. I make this request because I was employed by you personally, and because you are entirely familiar with the scope of that employment I prefer that you rather than myself should speak on these points.

"Very truly yours, etc.,
"J. B. FORAKER."

"Cleveland, O., Oct. 6, 1903.
"Hon. Joseph B. Foraker, Cincinnati.
"My Dear Sir:—I am just in receipt of yours of the 5th inst., asking me to write you in regard to your employment, with permission to use my letter, if occasion should seem to require.
With that request I am glad to comply.
"In December, 1898, at the time you were employed by me, there was pending against the Standard Oil Company, in the Supreme Court of the State of Ohio, very serious and difficult litigation.

"It was in the midst of these difficult cases, with the very serious consequence incident to any adverse decision, that, with the approval of my client, I turned to you for assistance and advice. The Standard Oil Company of Ohio had endeavored in good faith to comply with the order of the supreme court. The trust certificate holders had, by a resolution passed at a meeting held in New York in March, 1892, determined not only that the Standard Oil Company of Ohio should withdraw from the so-called trust agreement, but that the trust itself should be dissolved, and the trustees had entered in good faith upon the policy of a dissolution and a winding up of the entire trust.

"I had, I remember, a prolonged interview with you when I first met you in connection with this business. Copies of the pleadings in the com-tempt case were shown you and the substance of the evidence already taken narrated, together with the action of the certificate holders taken at the meeting and the course of proceeding of the trustees carrying out the purpose of the resolution to dissolve the trust, and a little later, certified copies of the voluminous pleadings in the four cases above named,
and the interrogatories annexed thereto, directed to the officers of the four companies above named, were furnished, and the history of each one of those companies and the relation of each to the Standard Oil Company of Ohio, and of the other organizations alleged to be members of the trust (some twenty in number) became the subject of investigation at once by you.

"It was upon a realization of these serious and disastrous consequences, well knowing your ability as an attorney, and the respect lawyers and courts had for you throughout the state that I sought your service.

"Your employment extended over a period of more than two years, during which time I was repeatedly in consultation with you, and there was no phase of the litigation of which you were not fully abreast all the time,
and your counsel was fully appreciated
by my associate counsel and by my client, and there never was a particle of effort upon our part to conceal your relation to the interests we represented.

"Your efforts greatly contributed to the success of the litigation and the preservation of the property by its owners. At the time of your employment and when it ceased, as it did, according to my recollection, somewhere about the first of January, 1901, there was no intimation from any source whatever of criticism or attack on the part of the federal government.
That did not come for more than four years afterwards, and so far as I know, and I have been intimately in touch with the litigation and troubles of the company for twenty years, and am still, nothing has ever been asked of, or accepted by you inconsistent with your public duties, and so far as I know you have had no relation whatever to the company, as an attorney or otherwise, for more than seven years. Very truly yours,
"VIRGIL P. KLINE."

ELIOT Radical Reformer, Who Built Up Harvard University.

Notable Record of Her Dignified and Progressive President. Who, After a Service of Forty Years, Will Vacate His Office Next May

By GEORGE H. PICARD.

IN the sunniest corner of University
Hall, the administrative building of Harvard, is the office of the president of that ancient seat of learning. It is a bright, cheerful room finished and furnished in light colors, and through the very small panes of the four windows the sun comes streaming in all day long, a powerful coadjutor of the wood fire in the large open fireplace and the heaped up wood box beside it, all suggestive of the genial sitting room of a farmhouse of half a century ago.

On all sides there are evidences of well preserved age and good housekeeping. A cabinet against the wall between two diamond paned windows
was once the property of John Eliot, colonial apostle to the Indians. Another cabinet, higher and more imposing, once belonged to Judge Joseph Story, professor in the Harvard Law school more than a hundred years ago and afterward a member of the United States supreme court. Of the pictures on the walls none is more recent than 1869, one over the fireplace showing a group of former presidents of Harvard
—Josiah Quincy, Edward Everett, Ja-
red Sparks, James Walker and Cornelius C. Felton.

No one among them and all the others who have directed the affairs of the great university has made a record

and that the text books used by them were only notable on account of their perverseness. In the matter of selecting a president, the magazinist wrote, it was not always judicious to choose a clergyman, men of other professions being quite as competent.

These articles made a great stir in Cambridge. They were unsigned, but it soon became known that they were written by Charles William Eliot, a young professor in the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

It was recalled in college circles that Eliot's four years as a student at Harvard had been passed under the presidency of Jared Sparks, the famous Unitarian minister and biographer.
His tutorship and assistant professorship at that institution were under the presidency of James Walker, another Unitarian minister. He was put in charge of the chemical department of the Lawrence Scientific school by another Unitarian minister, Cornelius Felton, and at the last he served under the administration of Thomas Hill,
also a minister of the same denomination. In 1857, when only twenty-three years of age, he delivered a course of lectures on chemistry at the Harvard Medical school, and it gave him some insight into the resources, policy and management of that institution. As an assistant professor he came into close contact with the prevailing methods

"Our new president has turned the whole university over like a flapjack.
* * * It is so curious to see a young man like Eliot, with an organizing brain, a firm will, a grave, calm, dignified presence, taking the ribbons of our classical coach and six, feeling the horses' mouths, putting a check to this one's capers and touching that one with the lash, turning up everywhere in every faculty (I belong to three) on every public occasion and taking it all as naturally as if he had been born president."

Harvard's New Ruler.

In another letter to Motley, the historian, the Autocrat of the Breakfast Table described the new ruler of Harvard to this effect:

"I cannot help being amused at some of the scenes we have in our medical faculty—this cool, grave young man proposing in the calmest way to turn everything topsy turvy. 'How is it, I should like to ask,' said one of our number the other evening, 'that this faculty has gone on for eighty years managing its own affairs and doing it well—how is it that we have been going on so well in the same orderly path for eighty years, and now, within three or four months, it is proposed to change all our modes of carrying on the school? It seems very extraordinary, and I should like to know how it happens.' 'I can answer Dr.
A.'s question very easily,' said the bland, grave young man. 'There is a new president.' The tranquil assurance of this answer had an effect such as I hardly ever knew produced by the most eloquent sentences I ever heard."

Hard Worker.

For the first twenty-five years President Eliot was misunderstood, misrepresented, maligned, hated, with and without cause. It was only when the lesson of his absolute fairness was learned and when along with that lesson came the conviction that he was a man of extraordinarily far vision that he was rewarded with a loyalty among those about him such as is inspired only by the rarest among men. He began his rule at Harvard with a twofold conception of his functions. He was first of all the head of a large and complicated establishment, a plant valued at some millions and with a large force of employees. From this point he has always looked on the university as a superintendent might look on his factory. His efficiency in this direction is incomparable. In his executive capacity he has always been as hard a worker as his splendid physique and his wonderful endurance would permit.
He finds great satisfaction in the fact that his work at Harvard has averaged twelve hours a day and that without his summer holiday he would have had no more time for reflection and real living than an operative in a cotton mill. Fortunately for him he has always fortified his sturdy physique with abundant exercise. His erect, dignified body astride a big boned horse has been a common sight to students hurrying to breakfast. While he was a student and even after he became an instructor he rowed regularly, once appearing in a public contest on the Charles river. For twenty years he spent his summers with his family in a tent on the Maine coast.

Radical Educational Reformer.

With the other manifestation of President Eliot's idea of his functions, his service to the university and to the community in general as a reformer, the world is familiar. In a strictly literal sense he has not been a teacher. Since he took office he has practically never made his appearance in a class room. But he has been a radical reformer in educational methods.
He has put his original, independent theories of education into actual practice. Clearing the field of old tradition, he approached the business as if there were no system of education already in existence.

But it is not as a smasher of tradition that Dr. Eliot has distinguished himself most especially. His "new education" has been conspicuous not so much for what it has destroyed as for what it has constructed. In his inaugural address in 1869 he outlined an entire system of education from kindergarten to professional school
adapted to the needs of America.
That address contained the germ of all the reforms in American education brought about since that day. It was a mighty and a heroic undertaking,
but he has accomplished it.

Future generations will look back to the administration of President Eliot
as to a veritable educational golden age. In length it is unprecedented.
His forty years of service are fourteen more than the combined terms of the five presidents who immediately preceded him. Only one other college president, the famous Mark Hopkins of Williams, ever served so long. He has seen the student body grow from 1,059 in 1869 to upward of 5,000 in 1908. When he took charge at Harvard there were only fifty-eight instructors all told. Today there are 550. Under his competent management the university's resources have increased from two millions to sixteen.

Dr. Eliot is a tall man, erect still and of courtly dignity. His almost seventy-five years have not robbed him of the noble, virile bearing of his earlier years. He still preserves the figure and carriage of an athlete. Longfellow, Emerson, Holmes, Lowell—these and many other friends of former days broke down under the strain of work and years, but there is not a youth among the Harvard undergraduates with a manlier physique than that of Charles William Eliot, whose forebears were preaching religious liberty when one of his predecessors at Harvard was praying publicly for the success of the American army in the field with Washington.

PRESIDENT CHARLES W. ELIOT AT THREE STAGES OF HIS CAREER.

equal to that of the man who for the last forty years has occupied that homely and old fashioned room, but has given notice that on May 19, 1909,
it will be at the service of another tenant.

Forty years ago next spring the office of president of Harvard college was vacant. Dr. Thomas Hills had resigned it on account of ill health and had been out of active service for several months. The responsibility of choosing his successor was vested in the corporation, consisting of five fellows and the treasurer, but it was necessary that its choice should be approved by the board of overseers, numbering thirty members.

Articles That Made a Stir.

Just at that time, when the matter of selecting a new president was absorbing much attention in college circles and in the educational world at large, there appeared in the Atlantic Monthly two articles in successive numbers which at once commanded universal attention. They were entitled "The New Education" and treated at length on its organization and purpose. These articles were a sharp attack on current educational methods,
more especially those which were then in vogue at the Lawrence Scientific school at Harvard. The Sheffield Scientific school at Yale was cited as a worthy example of the new teaching,
but the old traditions which prevailed
at Harvard were ridiculed mercilessly.
The writer declared that the old time,
unprogressive professors at the latter institution had flanges on their mental wheels which would fit only one gauge

He published a manual on the subject, and that gave him an opportunity to discover how new text books were received when their introduction interfered with the popularity of the works of older professors of like character. His experience as a teacher at his alma mater was not congenial, and he retired from the classic shades of Cambridge and traveled abroad for two years.

On his return he accepted the professorship at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, where matters were not warped or dominated by generations of moribund traditions and where his new ideas of educational training found a respectful hearing and subsequent rapid development.

Telling Campaign Document.

This was the experience which was reflected in the magazine articles on "The New Education." No one recognized in the effort a telling campaign document, yet it turned out in that way. The deep thought, the high ideal, the spirit of reform, the intolerance of mediocrity, were so forcibly and intelligently expressed that the suggestion of the author as a person qualified to fill the vacant presidency was unavoidable. This sentiment soon crystallized into definite shape, and at the May meeting of the corporation Charles William Eliot, then only thirty-five years of age, was elected president of Harvard.

What happened when President Eliot moved into the administrative office was once described wittily in one of Oliver Wendell Holmes' quaint letters as follows:

Now that the various party managers have figured out just how badly Bryan was beaten by Taft, they are turning their attention to an analysis of the vote cast at the recent election. One of the most interesting features in this connection is the statement of Eugene V. Chafin, Prohibition candidate for President, who at the Washington Home the other night, said that the Prohibition movement on November 3 received a decided setback. Mr. Chafin says:

"With the aid of the liquor business the Republicans carried New York City, Chicago, St. Louis and Cincinnati. Every temperance candidate of prominence on both sides was knocked out at the recent election, including Governor Folk of Missouri."

That the Prohibition movement made no headway, as Mr. Chafin intimates, is borne out by an analysis of the votes in the various States. The storm center of the Prohibitionists' fight in the election was in Indiana, Ohio, Illinois, South Dakota, Rhode Island, Minnesota and Tennessee. In each of these States the Prohibitionists were defeated and a number of well known candidates who championed their cause failed in election.

Probably the hottest contest over the local option question was in Indiana, because of its pivotal character in the national election. The result is well known. Local option received a black eye, and the cause of temperance was put back further than it was before the campaign.

In Ohio, the birthplace of the Anti-Saloon league, the lines between the temperance people and the liberals were sharply drawn. The Anti-Saloon element championed the cause of Gov. Harris, candidate for re-election. Harris had been prominent during his administration as an advocate of temperance and had obtained the passage of the Rose county option law by the legislature. In the campaign, he was opposed by Judson Harmon, the Democratic candidate, who was supported by the more liberal voters of the State. The result was that Ohio gave Taft 65,000 plurality, but in spite of this sweeping Republican victory, the Republican candidate on a local option platform went down in defeat and his Democratic opponent was elected by over 20,000. State Senators Rose, Sites, Meek and Drake, who were lieutenants of Harris in his Anti-Saloon campaign, also were defeated. Rose was the father of the county option law, and Drake the chairman of the committee of the legislature having charge of all temperance legislation.

In Illinois the Anti-Saloon people centered their fight in an effort to capture the legislature for county option. Returns show that they were overwhelmingly defeated, 75 per cent of the members elected to the Senate and House being opposed to county option. The leader of the local option forces in the last legislature, O. F. Berry, was retired.

In South Dakota, the question of county option was squarely presented to the people of the entire State under the initiative and referendum. The Prohibitionists and the Anti-Saloon leaguers had joint headquarters and made a vigorous fight. County option was defeated by 7000. The defeat of the question is more decisive in South Dakota because it is a purely agricultural State and in recent years had experience in State Prohibition.

The Anti-Saloon league selected Rhode Island as a point in which to test its strength in New England. Two weeks before the election under a decision of the Supreme court, it became necessary for the State as a whole to vote on the question of license or no license. A short, but lively campaign followed and resulted in the wets retaining all the towns and cities they had and regaining seven more towns that had previously gone dry. The aggregate majority of the towns favoring licenses was 20,000 or more.

The verdict of the voters of Tennessee, who in the June primaries voted against State wide Prohibition, was sustained in the general election. At the primaries, Gov. M. R. Patterson, Democrat, opposed E. S. Carmack, editor of The Tennessean of Nashville. Carmack favored State Prohibition and after his defeat bolted the primary decision and the platform and continued his fight for State wide Prohibition. Patterson was re-elected by 35,000, running 10,000 ahead of the national ticket. A majority of the legislature is opposed to State wide Prohibition and will stand by Gov. Patterson's policies.

The main issue in the election of a legislature in Minnesota was county option. The fight was carried on in nearly every district and as the contest progressed, Candidate Jacobson, Republican nominee for Governor, came out squarely for county option. He declared against the saloon in general. The result was that while Taft carried the State by 75,000, Johnson, the Democratic candidate for governor, was re-elected for a third term by over 30,000, and the legislature is 2 to 1 against county option.

In Colorado, Wisconsin, Nebraska, and Idaho, the issues were identical. The county option question did not enter into the State campaign, but an effort was made by the Anti-Saloon forces to capture the legislature. In all three States the attempt failed and a majority of the legislators chosen in each State are opposed to county option.

Ghost Slayer Wanted

(Indianapolis Star.)

With the coming of winter and the close of the political season, ghosts have made their appearance in Rushville. Whether they are specters of political aspirations or merely ghosts of the common genus has not been determined.

Something was seen the other night near Seventh and Benjamin streets that at first looked like a white ball, afterward changing to the form of a dog. The five or six girls in the party, thus surprised took to their heels with the supposed animal after them. The farther they ran the larger the strange apparition kept growing, until it had attained the size of a horse. All at once it disappeared like a bursting bubble and there was a rattling as of fine glass over the pavement.

Another crowd that had been detained until a late hour saw a little old man coming down Seventh street. He was not more than a foot high and his snowy beard swept the ground. He too, disappeared.

Another vision still was that of seven babies clad in the garb of the garden of Eden and seated on a center table. In a moment the thing faded like a cloud, and lo, there was a moose head where moose heads had never before been.

Rushville is full of terror and doesn't know what to do. If some authentic slayer of ghosts will visit the city Rushville will be much obliged.

The Vaudet has an excellent program to offer to the public tonight. The tragedy Richard III, Shakespeare's masterpiece, will be given in full. This promises to be one of the best films ever shown here. It is something out of the ordinary. Miss Gregg will sing a new song.

The Grand has a good program to offer tonight in the film, "Lew Dockstrader's Minstrels or Late for Rehearsal." This is one of the best comic films which has ever been shown in this city. A new song will be sung by Miss Brown.

What Our Neighbors Are Talking About

TWO SIDES TO THE QUESTION

(Connersville Courier.)

The barbers in this city are considering the advisability of raising the price of shaving from ten cents to fifteen cents, says the Rushville Republican. Nearly all of them have signed a paper agreeing to make the change. An increase in the price of supplies, labor, rent, cost of living, and the fact that people have been educated to expect a lot of extras with a shave now, is the reason given for the proposed increase.

The barbers are perfectly right in this. The price of a shave should be fifteen cents considering all the little things that necessarily have to go with the work to put a man out of first class and expect to have him return.

But have they looked into their customer's expense book. Have they stopped to reflect what a difficult matter it is for a man with a large family to support, and the cost of living just as high as that of the barber, to pay fifteen cents twice a week for a shave. The explanation for the proposed increase can be traced to the fact that the average man cannot afford to get shaved more than once a week at the present price owing to a lack of funds, and owing to this falling off in the trade the barbers are not receiving as much money as heretofore, hence the raise.

JOKE ON THE PROSECUTOR.

(Shelbyville Republican.)

Charles Hack, Democratic prosecutor for Rush and Shelby counties, tells a story on himself which is amusing.

During the recent campaign Charlie was in the thickest of the fray, especially in the out townships, making speeches for the cause of Democracy. While he was in Geneva one night addressing a large audience he made the remark that he had waited a few nights previous to that time for two hours standing in the rain, in this city, trying to catch a glimpse of the Taft special. That he always desired to see great men, that was why he wanted to see Taft. He told the audience that he expected to visit Washington, D. C. next spring and he knew that Taft would not be in the White House, as Bryan would be the next President.

This morning he received an envelope in the mail which had been mailed at Waldron, a few miles from Geneva. He opened it, and much to his surprise drew out a souvenir post card with the pictures of Taft and Sherman. Turning the card over he read, and then a smile appeared on his face.

"Do you think you will see Mr. Taft at the White House if you go to Washington?" were the words on the back of the card.

The envelope was addressed in a feminine hand and the prosecutor is now showing it to his friends.

The interest of the farmers of Rush county at this particular moment is not so lively in the uplift movement as in the proposition for somebody to help shuck corn.

John W. Taylor and Earl Taylor filed suit today in the Rush county circuit court against Jesse A. Shelton and Samuel L. Lowe for payment of promissory note, demand, $135.

George W. Looney, former trustee of Union township, says the corn crop grown on his farm, east of this city, this season, is the best of his experience on the farm.

Superintendent Mahin has put in new poles over the city for the arc lights. One pole with a straight iron bar at the top is used for each light, whereas two poles were formerly used.

Demand for horses is continually increasing. The raising or growing of horses has not kept pace with the demands of the country, and the horse industry offers an inviting field for profit.

Rev. W. H. Hanna, a missionary from the Philippine Islands, filled the pulpit at the Main Street Christian church yesterday both morning and evening.

Dr. William A. Millis, president of Hanover College, gave an address on "The Relation of Colleges to the Church" yesterday morning at the First Presbyterian church. The subject was timely as it was educational day.

One of the best and most appropriate features of the fine musical program rendered at the First Presbyterian church Sunday night was a quartette by Miss Bertha Megee, soprano; Miss Nancy Hogsett, alto; John Ferveda, tenor; Leon McDaniel, baritone.

Farmers Surprised, Astonished!

The great surprise of every one who is investigating the opportunity in Mexico for farmers, is that of distance.

They are astonished to find that the farms of the Southern Mexico Development Company are about 600 miles nearer to Rush county than Los Angeles, Seattle or Portland is to us.

That puts a different face on the matter, and when the low fare and short time to go there is considered, the advantages offered seem all the more attractive.

When you can get to a place in about 4½ days, in which you can buy land at $15.00 per acre on easy terms; land where you can make $175 per year per acre on bananas, $200 or more per acre on pineapples, and $60 on corn, it strikes the investigator as silly to stay away and eke out a scanty profit by hard work and worry in this country.

The fine climate and health conditions and the great opportunity for making money in many ways, are all a matter of record made by worthy people, whose testimony may be seen in the office of the Southern Mexico Development Company at 129 West Second street, Rushville.

Chapter 16

AFTER all, Mr. Brett's ticket was different from mine again, but I suppose he couldn't arrange to have the same kind and see something of me on the journey, because, as I'd asked him, he would have done it if possible. We went back part of the way we had come the night before, in the same grand kind of train, as far as Cleveland, which we reached in the morning quite early. We got out there, for no fine trains like that stop at the village near which Mr. Brett's cousins live, and he said the best thing we could do would be to drive to the farm in a motor car. It was about forty miles away, but with a good car, which he could easily get, we wouldn't be more than two hours, allowing for bad roads. If we didn't take a motor we should have to wait half the morning for a slow train, and then have a drive at the end of six or seven miles in some kind of a country conveyance.

When I hesitated, thinking of expense, Mr. Brett explained that among his many other occupations he had once acted as a chauffeur, therefore, knowing the tricks of the trade and being a sort of professional himself, he could always hire a motor at a nominal price. This settled my doubts. We drove in a cab to a hotel, where he left me with Vivace, while he went to search for a car. Presently he came back with a smart gray thing which matched my clothes, and not only was there a gray chauffeur to go with it, but a gray holland coat for me, and a gray silk hood, with a lace curtain. I do think they do things well in America.

I looked forward to seeing the country between Cleveland and Aristo, which is the name of the town nearest to the Valley farm, because except for the drives I had had near Newport I knew nothing at all of the real country in America. I had an idea that we should pass some fine country houses and see a number of pretty little nestling villages.

The name of Aristo was rather impressive and classical sounding, I thought, and I had visions of meeting on the way pretty girls driving or riding, and good looking, well groomed men such as I had met always in the country round Newport. But as we went on and on I was disappointed. The scenery itself was lovely, rich and peaceful, with groves of maple trees which would have been quite new to me if I hadn't seen a few in the east. But the villages were blots rather than beauty spots, and we saw only peasants and farm people.

Mr. Brett was driving the car, with me beside him, while the chauffeur sat behind, and I made some such remark to him before I stopped to remember that his relatives were farm people. I could have bitten my tongue then, but he didn't seem to be offended.

"Outside the towns in the west there are few of what you would call gentle folk," he said, with just the faintest emphasis of good natured scorn for English prejudice; "nor are there any 'country houses' as you understand the name in England. Here people live in the country to till the land and to live by tilling it, yet they don't call themselves 'peasants,' either. It isn't that they're snobbish and want to seem to be what they are not, don't think that for a moment. But they—well, I won't try to describe them. Many people from the old world would never understand what they really are or their point of view, but you will, Lady Betty. You are quick and sympathetic and intelligent, and when I ask you to define for me the difference between the farmers of Ohio, as typified by my cousins and their neighbors in Summer county, I shall be surprised if you don't exactly hit the nail on the head. They'll surprise you a little at first, I warn you, and for about ten minutes maybe you won't know what to make of them. But I count on you to see the point in spite of all your traditions."

"What have my traditions got to do with it?" I asked.

"Wait and see."

I laughed. "Well, I only wish I knew what my traditions are," said I. "I suppose I ought to know, but I don't think I do."

"You may feel them pricking up and down your spine for a bit, while you're getting used to a new order of things at the Valley farm," answered Mr. Brett. "And yet I don't know. I shall be enormously interested in watching the effect upon you before I—have to say goodby."

I forgot everything else he had been saying when I heard that last sentence.

"Will you have to say goodby soon?" I asked him in a crestfallen voice.

He didn't speak for a minute, perhaps on account of a series of bumps in the road.

At last he said, "To tell you the truth, Lady Betty, I should like to stop and pay my cousins a little visit, but—I don't know if I have a right to."

"Oh, why not?" I asked. "Wouldn't they be delighted to keep you?"

"Perhaps, I hope so. But what about you?"

"If it depended one bit on me, you'd make a long visit."

"Wouldn't you really mind seeing me hanging around—sometimes? Just at meals, you know—or to take you a drive once in awhile?"

I looked at him merrily through my tale window, for I felt happy and light hearted, and the world seemed such a very nice place to live in at that moment.

"Do you truly need to have me answer that question?" I asked. "If you do, we can't be real friends as I thought, after all."

"You say that because you are kind—too kind to have reflected enough perhaps. An accident—the happiest accident in the world for me—has given me a chance to see something of you, Lady Betty, but do you understand that only by an accident could a rough fellow like me have any place at all in your life, no matter how small or temporary? I don't want to take advantage of that sweet kindness of yours, which is partly all your own and partly the essence of your youth and innocence."

"Now, you are making me very cross," said I. "I won't hear you talk so. You may laugh at me, because we've known each other such a short time, but really and truly you are the best friend I've ever had. I wouldn't lose you for any one or anything in the world, and I don't mean to, unless you get tired of me—so, there."

"Tired of you! Good heavens, I tired of you!"

"Very well, then," said I flippantly. "so far as I'm concerned you needn't say 'goodby' to the Valley farm until you feel the first symptoms coming on."

"Lady Betty," remarked Mr. Brett, "I wonder if there's another girl like you in the world?"

"According to my mother, there isn't another so vexing," I replied.

We both laughed, and then he suddenly said, "Here is Aristo."

I stared about wildly. "Where, where?" I asked.

He laughed a great deal more. "Why, you're looking right at the postoffice and the grocery and dry goods store." Sure enough, there was a brown wooden building at the top of a hill we were just climbing, but there was nothing else anywhere, except a clear brown creek and some sweet smelling meadows with a white horse grazing in a bored way over rather a queer fence, and some cows asleep under a clump of maple trees, on our side of a young birch grove.

"Where's the rest of it?" I went on. "Where are the other shops and the houses and the people?"

"Oh, the other shops and the houses aren't built yet, but they may be any time, and then the people will come. But the fact that they haven't come yet doesn't prevent this from being Aristo. But you mustn't think this is the only place you will have to do your shopping when you're at the Valley farm. Wait till you see Hermann's Corners. There's a great emporium there, and you'll ruffle the feelings of half the ladies of Summer county if you don't fall in love with it and its proprietor, Whit Walker. Promise you'll let me be the first one to introduce you to both?"

We were in a sweet and gracious country now. It looked as if Mother Nature would never allow any of her children who obeyed her to be poor or unhappy here. As we whizzed along the up and down road between billowing meadows of grain we could see here and there a farmhouse showing between trees or peering over the brow of a rounded hill, but there was none where I longed to stop until we came in sight of a dear, old, red brick house—really old, not what some Americans call old. It was set back several hundred yards from the road and an avenue of magnificent maples—each one a great green temple—led up to the comfortable, rose draped porch which sheltered the door. There was an old fashioned garden on one side, with a running flame of hollyhocks hemming it in. The background was a dark green oak and maple grove, and in a clover meadow beyond the garden was a colony of beehives. It looked an ideal, story book place, and I wished it might be the Valley farm, but thought such a thing too good to be true. When one is going to stop at a house one has never seen, as the saying is, it usually turns out to be the one of all others you like least.

So I was delighted when we turned in at the open gate, with its guardian apple tree on either side. We sailed up the avenue under the maples, but instead of making for the front entrance, turned off into a farm road which led round the side of the house, and the tooting of our horn brought three women smiling and waving to a door under a long, narrow veranda before we stopped.

Brought three women smiling and waving to a door under a veranda.

One was a tall, thin, middle aged woman, with gray-brown hair pulled away from her forehead and done in a knob at the back of her head. Her skin was sunburned; she wore a black and white print frock, without so much as a ruffle or tuck, and her sleeves were rolled up over her sun-browned arms above the elbow; she had no real pretensions of being pretty, and yet, somehow, she was one of the nicest looking women I ever saw. She had the sort of expression in her eyes and in her smile you would like your mother to have, if you could have had your mother made to order exactly according to your own ideas.

On her right stood a very pretty girl with a dazzling white complexion, all the whiter for a gold powder of freckles, black eyes rather deep set, dimples and a quantity of curly, bright red hair wound in a crown of braids round her head. She was in print, too, but it was blue and very becoming.

On the tall woman's left was another girl, also pretty, though in a florid way, with great blue eyes, a full mouth and a mouse colored fringe down to her eyebrows. She was more elaborately dressed than the others, with a lot of coarse lace on her blouse and a pink skirt. But she hadn't the look of simple refinement which the first two had in spite of their plain clothes and rolled up sleeves. All three waved something excitedly. One had a huge kitchen spoon, another a book and the third a towel.

Your Neighbors Can Tell You

No doubt, if you yourself don't know, of many marvelous cures of Stomach, Liver, Blood and Skin affections that have been made by the use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, for it has a most successful record of over 40 years.

These CURES embrace also many bad cases of Weak Lungs, lingering Coughs, Bronchial, Throat and Lung affections, some of which, no doubt, would have run into Consumption, had they been neglected or badly treated. We don't mean to say that the "Golden Medical Discovery" will cure Consumption when fully seated, but it will strengthen weak lungs, improve digestion, and make pure, rich, red blood thereby overcoming and casting out disease-producing bacteria and giving robust, vigorous health.

All particulars about the "Discovery," its composition and uses, in Common Sense Medical Adviser, 1000 pages, revised up-to-date, sent for 31 cents, in one-cent stamps in cloth covers, or 21 cents for paper covered, to pay cost of mailing only. Or send post card request for free booklet to WORLD'S DISPENSARY MEDICAL ASSOCIATION, Dr. R. V. Pierce, President, No. 663 Main Street, Buffalo, N. Y.

If You Don't Know

No Man is Stronger Than His Stomach

A strong man is strong all over. No man can be strong who is suffering from weak stomach with its consequent indigestion, or from some other disease of the stomach and its associated organs, which impairs digestion and nutrition. For when the stomach is weak or diseased there is a loss of the nutrition contained in food, which is the source of all physical strength. When a man "doesn't feel just right," when he doesn't sleep well, has an uncomfortable feeling in the stomach after eating, is languid, nervous, irritable and despondent, he is losing the nutrition needed to make strength.

Such a man should use Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It cures diseases of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition. It enriches the blood, invigorates the liver, strengthens the kidneys, nourishes the nerves, and so gives health and strength to the whole body.

You can't afford to accept a secret nostrum as a substitute for this non-alcoholic medicine of known composition, not even though the urgent dealer may thereby make a little bigger profit. Ingredients printed on wrapper.

ORDINATION OF POPE PIUS X.

Occured in the Town of Padua
Fifty Years Ago Today.

CELEBRATING THE JUBILEE

With All the Pomp and Ceremonial of the Church, the Pope is Today Celebrating the Golden Jubilee of His Ordination, the Great Cathedral of St. Peter's Being Thronged by the Devout, All Classes of Roman Society Being Represented From the Noble to the Beggar.

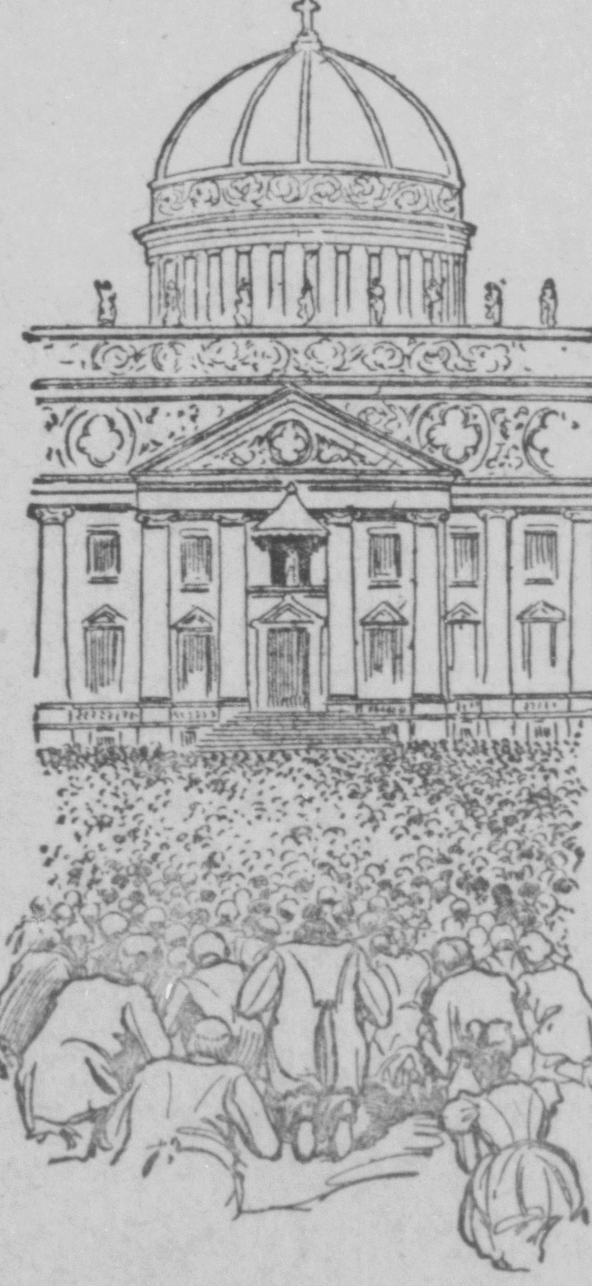

Rome, Nov. 16.—With all the hereditary pomp and ceremonial of the Roman Catholic church his holiness Pope Pius X. celebrated today the fiftieth anniversary of his ordination to the priesthood. Devout believers thronged St. Peter's to hear the singing of the pontifical high mass by this holiness. All classes of Roman society were represented from the high officials of the Vatican and those of the Quirinal who remain steadfast in the old faith to the street beggar and small farmer of the outlying country. The singing of mass in St. Peter's by a pope has been a ceremony of rare occurrence in recent years, for the pontiff's daily administrations take place in his private chapel in the Vatican. All the high dignitaries of the church were congregated in St. Peter's, with many visiting churchmen and Roman Catholic laymen.

Great ceremonies attended the pope's entrance into the church. Seated in the sedia gestatoria, he was borne in on the shoulders of officers of the noble guard above the heads of the people, so that the congregation might behold the face of their spiritual leader. As the figure of the pontiff approached, giving the sign of benediction to the congregation, the peo-

THE POPE BLESSING THE WORLD. He knelt to receive his blessing. The scene in the vast interior of the church was most impressive. In the procession that followed the pope were the college of cardinals, the archbishops, bishops, prelates of the pope's household, heads of religious communities, the Knights of Malta, the Knights of St. Gregory and members of other ancient and historic orders. Pius X. Giuseppe Sarto, his holiness the pope, bishop of Rome and vicar of Jesus Christ, successor of St. Peter, prince of the apostles, supreme pontiff of the universal church, patriarch of the west, primate of Italy, archbishop and metropolitan of the Roman province and sovereign of the temporal dominions of the holy Roman church since Aug. 4, 1903, was born in Riese, Italy, June 2, 1835. He was educated at the diocesan seminary of Padua and ordained in 1858. He served as parish priest until 1875, when he became episcopal chancellor of the diocese of Treviso. From 1884 until 1893 he was bishop of Mantua, being elevated in the latter year to the sacred college with the title of patriarch of Venice. Five days after the death of Pope Leo XIII. he was elected pope.

ANOTHER ROYAL DEATH IN CHINA

The Real Ruler of the Empire Passes Away.

Peking, Nov. 16.—Tsze Hai An, the Dowager Empress of China, the autocratic head of the government, which she directed without successful interference since 1861, and without protest since 1881, died at 2 o'clock yesterday.

The announcement of the Dowager Empress' death was official and followed closely upon the announcement that Kuang-Hsu, the Emperor, had died Saturday at 5 o'clock in the afternoon, but it is believed that the deaths of both the Emperor and the Dowager Empress occurred a considerable time before that set down in the official statements.

SOME CORRESPONDENCE

Of an Interesting Nature Just Made Public.

St. Paul, Minn., Nov. 16.—The following correspondence which passed between Rev. Magnus Larson, pastor of the Swedish Baptist church of this city, and Judge William H. Taft has just been made public. The letter from Mr. Larson was directed to Judge Taft under date of September 26 last, and the answer by Judge Taft was dated Cincinnati, O., October 9, last. The letter of Rev. Larson to Judge Taft says:

"Dear Sir:—Pardon a few questions from a humble St. Paul preacher. The question I wish to ask concern your work in the Philippine Islands, and your attitude towards the Catholic church. Was it on your recommendation that $7,000,000 were paid to the Catholic church out of the United States treasury, and that the pope was consulted regarding this deal? Was the uprising in the Philippines mostly in the Spanish government, or against the Catholic friars?"

"Have not thousands of dollars been paid to Friars for libraries they have claimed to have been burned? Is it your conviction and policy that Catholic dignitaries and the Catholic church should have greater consideration from a public official and especially from the chief executive of our nation than any other recognized religious body? Very truly yours,

MAGNUS LARSON,
"Pastor of the Swedish Baptist Church, St. Paul, Minn."

Judge Taft's answer follows:
"My Dear Sir:—I have your letter of September 26. You ask me whether $7,000,000 were paid to the Catholic church out of the United States treasury, or my recommendation. I reply that it was not. The Friars agricultural lands in the Philippines, 425,000 acres, or about that amount, were purchased from the corporation formed by the three orders of the friars in the Philippines, and the money was paid from bonds issued by the Philippine government under the authority of congress, and is a charge upon the Philippine Islands. The purchase was approved by the Filipinos.

"The uprising in the Philippines was against the Spanish government and the Spanish Friars whom the government used as policemen in attempting to stamp out the sedition and political discussion among the Filipinos.

"No money has been paid to the Friars for libraries that they claim to have been burned, so far as I can recollect. The sum of money paid was for rent and damage to convents or rectories by United States soldiers.

"I do not think that Catholic dignitaries in the Catholic church should have greater consideration from a public official than any other regularly organized religious body.

"I am not a Catholic, and have not been affiliated with the Catholic church. All I have attempted to do was to do justice to that church and to the Filipino people. I have treated that church exactly as I would have treated any other church had it been in a similar position to that of the Catholic church. Very sincerely yours,

THE GIRL WITH THE AUBURN HAIR

Is on the outside package of every bottle of Parisian Sage. Should you forget the name, simply ask for the package with "the girl with the Auburn hair" upon it.

And what wonderful sale Parisian Sage has made for itself in America in a little over a year. And what a multitude of people have been cured of falling hair, dandruff and itching scalp by its use.

And how the American women praise Parisian Sage for its peculiar ability to turn harsh, faded, lusterless hair into fresh, beautiful, silky and lustrous hair in a few days.

Parisian Sage is today the favorite hair dressing and tonic of discriminating Americans, not because of sensational methods of advertising, but because it is the only hair restorer that will do just what it is advertised to do.

It kills the dandruff germ and cures dandruff in two weeks. If it doesn't, F. B. Johnson & Co., the agents in Rushville will give you your money back.

"I had been troubled with dandruff for five years, but since using Parisian Sage I have not been bothered with it. I only used one-half bottle when I noticed the dandruff disappearing. I consider it the best hair tonic I ever used."—Mrs. C. B. Morton, 450 Main street, Buffalo, N. Y., Aug. 10, 1908.

If you have't tried Parisian Sage get a bottle today. It is a delightful dressing. The price is 50 cents a large bottle at F. B. Johnson & Co., or direct, a 11c charge prepaid, by the American makers, Giroux Mfg. Co., Buffalo, N. Y.

When Buying a Farm, a Wise Farmer or Investor takes into account these Important Features.

- 1st. Fertility of Soil.
- 2d. Climate as a place to live in and the number of "growing days" in each year.
- 3d. Accessibility to markets.
- 4th. Price.

Land in Indiana, Ohio and Illinois that would satisfactorily measure up to the first three requirements, can not be bought for less than $100 an acre, and then will only produce one crop a year.

Nature's Gift to Man

Imagine a soil from 4 to 30 feet deep of amazing fertility, the alluvial deposit of ages on tropical bottom lands, the richest on the face of the globe.

Imagine a soil that will, year after year, without fertilization of any kind, except that provided by Nature, produce in one year on the same land, a crop of tobacco, then a crop of corn followed with a crop of beans. Of such soil is the San Felipe plantation, a portion of which is now being sold in Rush county at only $15 per acre, $1.00 down then 25 cents per month.
